Something's fishy: AG sues over regulations

Lawsuit. Coakley says NOAA regulations could destroy the state's fishing industry.

Attorney General Martha Coakley has filed a federal lawsuit against the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration for what state officials describe as over-restriction of the state's famous fishing industry. "NOAA's new regulations are essentially a death penalty on the fishing industry in Massachusetts as we know it," Coakley said Thursday at the Boston Fish Pier. The new regulations reduce the allowable catch for New England groundfish by 77 percent to let species like haddock, cod and yellow-tail flounder repopulate.

Standing in front of a fishing boat Thursday, Gloucester fisherman Joe Orlando said his livelihood has been slashed before his eyes since the cap went into effect on May 1.

"We won't be allowed to bring in enough catch this year to even pay my business' debts. I am in financial ruin. This fishery is in a disaster, and we need help," he said, adding that he used to catch 100,000 pounds of cod, but can now only catch

Bold allegations

"The dirty little secret is that this isn't about fish. This is about the vindictive agency."

Gloucester Rep. Ann-Margaret Ferrante, who on Thursday accused NOAA of taking aim at local fishermen for exposing excessive regulation enforcement and fines.

16,000 pounds, which he said "doesn't cut it."

In response to the suit, NOAA's Northeast Regional Administrator John Bullard said the quota cuts are severe, but necessary.

"We need to focus our energies on identifying constructive solutions for helping fishermen, such as refocusing effort on healthy, abundant groundfish and other species," Bullard said. "It is time for us to look forward, not backward, if we are going to be able to help fishermen through this difficult transition."

School bullying

Changes sought to anti-bullying law

The state's landmark anti-bullying law could see some changes to stiffen reporting requirements on school districts and create recognition that certain students are more vulnerable to bullying.

Lawmakers on the Joint Committee on Education heard Thursday from advocates pushing to require school districts to collect data on bullying incidents and report the information to the state.

The Department of Elementary and Secondary Education would then be required to review the data and publish an annual report containing statewide information on the frequency and nature of bullying in schools. SHNS

Trooper attacked. Man bites state police trooper, dies during struggle

A Connecticut man died from an apparent heart attack Wednesday night during a struggle in which he allegedly bit a state police trooper, tearing flesh from his arm, authorities said.

A Massachusetts State Police trooper working a paid detail near the Allston/Brighton tolls spotted the 47-year-old man wandering on a Turnpike ramp.

The trooper directed the unidentified man off of the ramp as another trooper arrived.

According to the Suffolk district attorney's office, the man became aggressive and started fighting.

"The man bit one trooper, removing a large chunk of flesh from his arm," the district attorney's office said.

The troopers used pepper spray to subdue the man, who later went into cardiac arrest and died at a hospital.

Mystery solved? Aircraft recovery group possibly locates Earhart's plane

Researchers have been trying to track Amelia Earhart's plane after it mysteriously disappeared in 1937.

More than 10 years ago, The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery (TIGHAR) isolated the Pacific island of Nikumaroro as the location where her plane likely went down. Now, the organization says that underwater sonar images taken during a 2012 island visit support the location theory.

TIGHAR believes Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, put down on the coral flats at the western end of the island.

Since discovering the location in 2000, other clues have been found, including shards of plexiglass from a wind-screen and aluminum from an aircraft body. Theories also suggest that Earhart and Noonan survived on the island for some time before dying of injury or infection.

The grainy photo reveals there is something approximately 600 feet below the surface. TIGHAR is calling it an "anomaly."

"The most prominent part of the anomaly appears to be less than 32 feet long," TIGHAR's website says.

Earhart's plane was reportedly 38 feet 7 inches long.

AMERICA: THE NO VACATION NATION

Quoted

Yet, once again, as summer gins up, millions of us will not be joining the ranks of those bound for beaches, resorts and theme parks.

In this regard, labor rights advocates have long complained that we lag far behind virtually every other major nation where vacation time is not only taken much more readily, but required by law. In Japan, workers receive a minimum of 10 days of vacation. In Germany, it jumps to 24 days. And in France, it's up to 30. No surprise there — I suppose you don't get that passionate about cheese without having some time on your hands, n'est-ce pas?

Still, the fact remains that most people living in the industrialized world take longer and more frequent breaks than do Americans. You can argue we've built an amazingly strong nation and economy through all of our hard work, despite recent setbacks. But I'm beginning to wonder if, by limiting, shortchanging or just plain skipping so many vacations, we're burning out the very "get 'er done" spirit that has led us to greatness and can help us recover now; we're losing our perspective and energy; we're going a little crazy.

So if you are planning to skip your vacation ... don't. Take the time. Recharge. That's my plan, and I think it's overdue. After all, I'm talking to dogs.

I was sitting in my backyard last night when my dog walked up. "You look tired," she said. "What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing," I replied. "Just beat. Too many hours at the office. Too many emails. You know how it is."

"Actually, no," she said. "I'm unemployed, and I lack opposable thumbs, but I get the idea. You know what you need, my friend? A vacation." She's right. And I suspect I am not the only one.

Yet, once again, as summer gins up, millions of us will not be joining the ranks of those bound for beaches, resorts and theme parks. Some people can't afford the trip; others fear that layoff-hungry bosses will see them as "lazy." And according to a study by the Center for Economic and Policy Research, about a quarter of us are allotted no vacation time by

Boston connection. Dad of Fla. man shot by FBI wants the agents charged

The father of a Chechen immigrant shot dead during FBI questioning over his links with the Boston Marathon bombing suspects said on Thursday that the American agents responsible were "bandits" who should face trial.

The FBI has said that Ibragim Todashev, 27, was being questioned at his apartment in Florida on May 22 when he suddenly attacked an agent and was shot and killed because of the "imminent threat posed by the individual."

"I want justice, and I want there to be an investigation, so that these people are tried under American law," said Todashev.

"These are not FBI agents but bandits — I cannot call them anything else, and they must be tried."

He showed reporters photographs of his son's shirtless corpse on a medical table with stitched-up, purplish wounds on his torso, arm and head. REUTERS

STRIPPED DOWN: WHAT'S

Trend. With "Girls" a hit and plus-sized models becoming the norm, we wonder: Are the days of the blonde bimbo over?

The biggest sex story of the past year didn't happen between Christian and Anastasia in some porn your mom read — it happened in Brooklyn when Adam banged Hannah and probably gave her an STD. The HBO series "Girls," with its frank depiction of bad dirty talk, venereal diseases, abortions, miscarriages and condom spill, is all about sex. But unlike "Sex and the City" before it, this show is a global hit partly because star/creator Lena Dunham is, well, average-looking. She's a chubby, tattooed, thin-haired 26-year-old. She's normal.

The hype comes at the perfect time for the "real beauty" movement — and for this Metro Sex Issue, themed "Feel Good Naked." Within the past month, plus-size model Jennie Runk made headlines when H+M debuted her modeling swimwear (despite being a dress size 14-16, not 0). Dove soap, on the tails of an ad campaign featuring plus-size women, launched an "anti-Photoshop" app that restores images to their original form. And "amateur" porn is the most popular category on YouPorn, ranking higher than "blondes." The house that Jenna Jameson built is crumbling. The question is: How quickly?

The model

"It's ridiculous that people are arguing. We should focus on embracing all sizes."

Jennie Runk, plus-size model for H+M

The editor

"We don't airbrush. There's something sexy about that."

Arielle Loren
founder, Corset magazine

So yes, how quickly?

In one year, or in five? "I don't think five years is enough," says Gabi Gregg, 26, a plus-size blogger. Her work went viral last year after she posted photos of herself looking sensual in a "fatkini" and, this week, she launches her own line of swimwear (see story, at right). "But people like Lena Dunham and Louis C.K. are opening doors. Just the fact that her body makes people so angry — if you read the comments, people are telling her to put on clothes. She has said that only makes her want to do it more. It's my favorite show."

Arielle Loren doesn't watch "Girls," but also traffics in blunt depictions of sex. Her magazine Corset (www.corsetmagazine.com) features graphic nudity and first-person erotica, and resembles someone's beautifully photographed diary. It became profitable after a year, and Loren sees it as part of a movement. "The way we learn about sex, the pornography industry drives a lot of that consciousness," says Loren, a 27-year-old American. "It starts to inform the way we think about 'sexy' from an early age. But there are multifaceted aspects of sex and what it can really be, which we explore in the magazine. That goes from everything you can do in the bedroom — physically — but also how we understand our bodies."

A recent Corset photoshoot, "Breasts in Erotic Daylight," features a brown bosom with stretch marks. "We definitely don't airbrush," says Loren. "There's something very sexy about that. Being able to see the hair follicles on a breast or the stretch marks on a woman's stomach." She now has subscribers here, in Canada, Peru, Brazil, Sweden and beyond.

And yet post a photo of a plus size-model online and you see not everyone's as accepting. Exhibit A: Jennie Runk.

Junk in Runk's trunk

The excitement (and debate) over Runk's H+M campaign made it all the way to Italy, where she was working in May. It led to at least one sleepless night. "I was thinking about all the media I've been getting and my mom reads a lot of the comments and she said, 'I can't believe somebody called you fat,'" remembers the 24-year-old, "and some people on the other side were like, 'The curvier bodies are better!' and it's so ridiculous that people are having these arguments. What if some girl looks at these pictures and looks exactly like me: How is she going to feel?"

She turned to Facebook with a post. "I've noticed that people like to debate what kind of body is better than an-

Tip from Corset editor

- Do the self-work. "Start by walking around your house naked. If you have a roommate, shut your door and walk around your room naked. The more you get comfortable with your naked self — not covering yourself up with a towel every time you take a shower, taking the time to be in your body and open like that — your confidence will slowly and steadily increase."

other," she wrote. "This is all wrong! To me, true beauty is defined by a healthy lifestyle and a genuine personality. Bodies are just meaty things that carry our personhoods around for us." A week later, Runk is still riled up. She notes that "bigger" models are getting more work, but "we should focus on embracing all sizes," she says.

"Should" is different than

"are." The chart below shows the Sex Symbols of 2013, as selected by our editors from a pool of actors who have notable projects this year — there are more shapes and sizes than there would have been in 1985, but it's still very thin and white. "We're going in the right direction," says Gregg, "but ..."

"This argument," adds Runk, "is going to be a thing of the past when —honestly, I don't know." On Facebook, she was more hopeful, saying it's "our differences that make us remarkable."

She laughs when she hears that again. "I've been told before I'm a little too naive."

'FATKINI' DESIGNER GABI GREGG

The Gabifresh.com blogger just crafted a line for Swimsuitsforall.com.

In school, did you realize you were bigger than everybody else?

Yes and no. I wasn't teased too much, luckily. It was mostly internal, feeling insecure next to my classmates, if they were thinner than me or had blonde hair. Nobody had to say anything. And I started trying to diet when I was in middle school and high school, and it wasn't until college that I came to accept myself.

How do the suits, um, work?
What do you mean by work?
[Laughs]

They fit so well. Is it made with a binding material, with latches or something?

Actually, no. I've had people ask about support, of course, but there's nothing special about the fabric of the suits. It's normal bathing suit fabric. In terms of the Galaxy suit, what makes it so special is the print — it's graphic and fun and looks great because it's so busy that it — I don't want to say it distracts the eye, because I don't care about that sort of thing, but that's what it does. And the high-waisted cut looks great on all women.

Are you OK with the term "fatkini"?

Yes. I didn't use it this year because it went so viral last year, and it was inspiring for many people but took away from it, for others, because they were stuck on the word and got angry and started commenting. It's a reclamation of the word "fat," especially in our community, we all get it. When it goes outside the community, people get angry and send emails. But I'm fine with it. At the end of the day, it's a fatkini because I'm fat and wearing a bikini. [Laughs]

How much do you weigh now?

I believe I'm around 225.

How tall are you?
I'm 5-foot-5.

Do you get flack for not being "fat enough?" Early on, there were some comments.

I don't get a lot. Once in a while, like when the bikini pictures come out. It's funny to see half the people commenting are disgusted by my body and the other half are like, fat women saying, "She's shaped so nicely so it doesn't count! I have fat hanging from my arm that she doesn't have!" I try to avoid the comments on other sites. Some women wish they could see women bigger than me in a bikini and I understand that but I can only be myself. SAM CASTONE

Health. The author of "WomanCode" turns your body into a "power source" with these sexy tips.

Bloating. Zits. Decreased sex drive. If you're a woman, and you're aging up, we may have just described your average Tuesday night. Alisa Vitti, a hormonal health expert and the author of "WomanCode," a book about "supercharging your sex drive," says it doesn't have to be that way. "What's normal is a sex drive that increases as you age," she says. "You need to train the body to maximize the kinds of foods that provide us with micronutrients that help us produce optimal levels of hormones, metabolize them and get them out of the body." It all starts with your diet.

AVOID:

SOY: More specifically, soy protein isolate. It's packed full of estrogen, which risks to exacerbate hormonal symptoms. However, small quantities of fermented soy, such as miso paste, tofu and tempeh, are OK.

COW'S MILK: It contains casein, a protein that can make it difficult for nutrients to get to the target glands of the endocrine system (a collection of glands that secrete hormones). This can make it difficult for proper hormonal function and elimination and worsen symptoms such as acne. Concerned about calcium? Bok Choy and sesame seeds are good alternatives to dairy.

WHEAT: Actually, it's the protein that gives wheat-based foods such as pizza their chewy texture: gluten. It has been shown to decrease fertility by raising stress levels.

LOAD UP ON:

GREEN JUICE: The antioxidant glutathione, present in raw fruit and vegetables, helps with egg quality, liver detoxification and to protect the ovaries. One juice a day is enough, just blend together some kale, cucumber, parsley, ginger, lemon and apple.

An Alternative Adult Boutique

At one point in her life, the woman we now know as Ela Darling was a librarian. But the 9 to 5 routine bored her. So she began posing in bondage shoots. Then she posed in nude bondage photography. Soon after, Ela was starring in lesbian and BDSM videos and hosting own website (www.darlingela.com), which she calls "pretty porn for smart people."

"I decided that if you put the nude and bondage together, you basically had porn," Ela tells us. "So, I decided to give it a shot — and I really, really liked it." The skinny, 5-foot-8 B-cup librarian nerd had become a porn star.

The girl next door

These days, your porn performer isn't always a hot blonde in a cheerleader outfit. Instead, she may resemble the actual girl next door. The most popular videos on YouPorn fall into the amateur category, and — whether it's filled with actual amateurs or not — there you'll find small breasts, stretch marks, acne, lanky bodies, big noses and other all-natural qualities.

"There's always been a market for the girl next door, [where] everybody's natural, but it's really popular now," veteran porn star Jesse Jane, now in her 11th year doing films, told Metro World News.

She says the Internet has led to the rise in "amateur" acts. People can enter the industry by posting on the Web instead of having to vie for the few contracts with an adult entertainment company.

"Before, you would know who the top porn girls were," Jesse says. "Now, you wouldn't be able to name a handful of the girls who are in the industry. Before, they made the focus on a star and built the companies around a girl, making that girl the fantasy."

Zombie porn

Jesse may be one of the last of the contract girls. Blonde movement to embrace who we are. For Ela — the girl-next-door with a fairy-like quality — that means that sometimes she's dressed up as a zombie. Sometimes she's peddling sweaty, smelly shoes to foot fetishists. Sometimes she's starring in BDSM videos, experimenting with machines and trying out being hog-tied and tortured.

Report. In the porn world, the blonde bombshell is losing out to "more natural" types. "But I don't think one is more acceptable than the other," says one star.

"What I didn't even realize shooting porn is how much I began to evolve in my comfort with sex and with my own body," she says. (The same could be said for the viewer, who can explore their basest fantasies in their living rooms.) Given that all-inclusive feeling she, for one, may dislike our photo above, pitting two women against one another. "There's lots of different 'persons' [in porn] but I don't think one is more acceptable than the other. People pursue porn in a way that's comfortable to them."

Will and Jaden Smith teaming up for "After Earth" has us thinking of other real-life parent-child movies. (Check online for our review of the film.) MATT PRIGGE

Blipp this pic to see how father and son Will and Jaden Smith fare in their postapocalyptic romp "After Earth." / COLUMBIA PICTURES

In theaters

Will and Jaden Smith

The film: 'After Earth' (2013)

Their ages: 44 and 14

Their roles: Will is a space general who tries to survive on a dangerous postapocalyptic Earth alongside his son, played by Jaden.

The result: Jaden is the luckiest kid in the world, whose father bought him "The Karate Kid." But their films together aren't pretty: "The Pursuit of Happyness," made when Jaden was 8, found them pursuing the American dream while spending nights on the street or in dodgy shelters.

The actors, films

Melvin and Mario Van Peebles

'Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song' (1971)

Their ages

39, 14

Their roles

Melvin plays an entertainer at a brothel falsely accused by "The Man." Mario plays his younger self in a fairly graphic introductory scene where he loses his virginity to a prostitute. Thanks, dad!

The results

Even though what was shot very nearly qualifies as child pornography, it apparently wasn't traumatic. Mario grew up idolizing and often working with his father. He became a filmmaker himself, making "New Jack City" and "Baadasssss!" — an account of the making of his father's pioneering black cinema classic. Mario even stars as his wildly charismatic, cigar-chomping, ladykiller pop.

Ryan and Tatum O'Neal

'Paper Moon' (1973)

32, 10

Ryan is a charismatic con man in the Depression-era South who collects fraudulent fees from rubes for bibles. Tatum plays a little girl who may be his daughter. She proves a grifting prodigy.

Ryan, often a wooden rent-a-hunk, was atypically alive and hilarious in this Peter Bogdanovich comedy. Ditto, for that matter, Tatum, who became the youngest-ever Oscar winner. She did "The Bad News Bears" but struggled through an adult career. Ryan, meanwhile, did two more films of major note ("Barry Lyndon" and "The Driver"), but soon returned to crap films. Their relationship became strained. Tatum alleged that Ryan hit on her at Farah Fawcett's funeral.

Harry and Jane Fonda

'On Golden Pond' (1981)

76, 44

Henry is a crotchety, terminally swearsy old-timer who is estranged from his daughter, played by Jane. This isn't that far from the truth, except that Henry wasn't married to Katharine Hepburn.

The two were famously estranged, despite him being, like her, a liberal, back when such a thing wasn't cool. The film helped them patch things up, just as happens in the film. Henry died soon after winning his first Oscar, which Jane accepted on his behalf.

Charlie and Martin Sheen

'Wall Street' (1987)

47, 22

Charlie is an upstart who gets associated with the wrong scene, while his father scowls. They also acted in this movie together.

The two would reunite, for about 10 seconds, in "Hot Shots Part Deux," in a scene that parodies "Apocalypse Now": Passing by each other on ships, they simultaneously stand and proclaim, "Loved you in 'Wall Street!'"

Sylvester and Sage Stallone

'Rocky V' (1990)

Sly is a slow mumblemouth who solved the Cold War, but is still stuck penniless in a miserable South Philly neighborhood because his brother-in-law Paulie is an idiot. Sage is his resentful son who gets an earring.

Sage took over the role of Rocky Jr. from someone actually named Rocky Krakoff. He didn't get great reviews, but neither did the film. Still, he acted again with his dad in "Daylight," and appears in Vincent Gallo's "Promises Written in Water," which Gallo won't let anyone see. Last year, Sage died of a heart attack at 36 years old.

Jon Voight and Angelina Jolie

'Lara Croft: Tomb Raider' (2001)

44, 14

Jolie is a buxom archaeologist who does all the things that Indiana Jones can't, like have breasts. Voight is her dead father who she meets in an alternate dimension.

Jolie and Voight have had a bumpy relationship. They reconnected as her career exploded, then "broke up" again, then came back together after her mother's death. Still, Voight said he found out about her double mastectomy with everyone else.

Joe and Buster Keaton

THE FILM:
'Sherlock, Jr.' (1924)

THEIR AGES:
58 and 29

THEIR ROLES:

Buster is a lowly movie projectionist who one day wills himself into the detective film he's screening. Joe plays the father of "The Girl."

THE RESULT:

Joe and his wife Myra were vaudeville legends who started using Buster in their act when he was only a few years old. Buster's shtick involved being thrown about the stage. Buster later repaid the favor by giving his father, by then a full-on alkie, bit parts in his some of his masterpieces.

Music. A slight change in color for the Chameleons

The Chameleon Arts Ensemble are returning to their roots. Every so often, the seven-member group rediscovers the spark that first made them fall in love with music as kids.

"As children, we all picked up spoons, rulers and pencils to strike anything that made a sound," says Ensemble percussionist William Manley.

And at this weekend's performance, "The Sounds of Song and Dance," the Chameleons are encouraging kids to make a lot of sounds in an interactive concert. Featuring classical pieces from around the world, young participants will be allowed to pluck and play some of the instruments along with the performers.

Manley, who has been a Chameleon for 12 years, will showcase his own talents in a solo segment of the concert called the "Anvil Chorus," composed by David Lang.

"It's a little bit like a metallic drum setup," says

Manley. "It involves all metal: copper, aluminum pipes, anything. It's really industrialized sounds."

He says the piece draws inspiration from blacksmiths. But he himself draws inspiration from passing on his interest in music.

"We're always happy to be interacting with the kids and parents love to see their children interact," he says. "It gets a little crazy, but it's great working with the kids."

house. Why? How? It's never clear. Sloppily introduced into the plot is a shadowy coterie of real magicians, with which our four Robin Hood leads aspire to join.

The actors look as lost as the audience: Poor Mark Ruffalo, as a detective, seems as frustrated as his character, forced to utter inane dialogue against inexplicable actions. Amazing tricks are rarely explained. If they are, the explanations would require more money, planning and manpower than necessary given the end goal (which makes no sense either). Not since "Dreamcatcher" has a major studio product been so consistently and inventively dumb.

A friend once said it was wrong to seek a simple, rational understanding of Andrei Tarkovsky's "The Mirror." The same could be said about "Now You See Me." The difference is that "The Mirror" is a mysterious, confounding art-film masterpiece, while "Now You See Me" is a silly magician thriller that plays like the ravings of a madman. A lot of dim entertainments make little rational sense, but there's usually at least a toe in reality, or its own peculiar set of rules. This has neither. It exists in a world without sense, and its story is even more confusing than the fact that it sports a hilariously overqualified cast.

Jesse Eisenberg plays one of four hot-shot street magicians — alongside Woody Harrelson, Isla Fisher and Dave Franco — embroiled in a simple plan: Become world-famous magicians who, while performing in the largest auditorium in Vegas, somehow steal money from a bank in France and spread the wealth among their packed

Love hasn't seen her daughter, Frances, in three years

This makes my heart ache. Courtney Love, grunge's version of Dina Lohan (alternately, The OG Amanda Bynes), admits in an interview on the "Howard Stern Show" that she hasn't seen her daughter, Frances Bean Cobain, in three years. And yet, things are "really good" between them.

"I'm really good with my daughter right now," she told Stern. Despite the fact they haven't seen each other in the flesh, they "email and tweet." And, really, if your mother is Courtney Love, emailing and tweeting is probably the stuff that happy mother-daughter relationships are made of. Love also disclosed that she's going to appear on a reality show, but demurred as to which one. Stern desperately wants it to be "American Idol," which, um, yes please. If not, "Duck Dynasty" could also work.

Stewart's never had, um, pizza?

If Patrick Stewart's Twitter account is to be believed, the "X-Men" star has never had a slice of pizza — until now. Stewart posted a photo of himself indulging in some of New York's finest, along with the caption, "My first ever pizza 'slice.' Please note the authentic NY fold." It is curious, of course, that he put slice in quotes. A follow-up tweet by Stewart to offer clarification actually didn't offer much clarification: "To clarify," he wrote, "I've never had a 'slice.'" Well, the important thing is that he has now.

Expert Pick: Ms. Kris Knievil

When it comes to pegging the most fabulous events going down for Pride Week, we couldn't think of a better expert to run down a few of them than Ms. Kris Knievil (of Jacques Cabaret and the Gold Dust Orphans):

Pride Week in Boston is when we in the gay community look back to remember our past, celebrate what we have accomplished and plan on what needs to be done in the future. There are many fabulous events, and as a full-time performing drag artist, I'll be at many of them. Here are some of my must-see/do events:

FRIDAY: I'll be going to Guilt Nightclub to watch "RuPaul's Drag Race" Winner Jinkx Monsoon and runner-up Ivy Winters perform. Guilt is our go-to club on Friday nights.

SATURDAY: It's Gay Day at Faneuil Hall! All ages are welcome, and it's family friendly, with shopping, dining and special entertainment.

MONDAY: It's the Royal Pride Pageant at Machine, and they'll be crowning the King and Queen of Boston Pride 2013. I am competing for the title of Queen of Pride, so come cheer me on! It goes from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

TUESDAY: Sleep, sleep, sleep and finish those costumes for the parade. It's a busy week!

WEDNESDAY: Got to the Queen's Voice singing contest finals at Club Cafe. Among the celebrity judges will be "RuPaul's Drag Race" judge Michelle Visage and my man crush Gay Jim from Kiss 108!

Everyone knows where to find the parade, the block parties and the typical events of Boston Pride. But don't forget to check out some of the new faces in town this Boston Pride Week! Here's your inside scoop, in this special Pride edition of MyMetro.

Our 20th anniversary celebratory season ends by honoring our musical traditions, past and future. We reprise Schubert's popular "Mass in G," from our first concert under the baton of David Hodgkins, and continue our tradition of introducing premieres and new works to our audiences. As a special treat, we will invite former singers to join us onstage and sing with us again, making this season a true full circle.

Coro Allegro is Boston's acclaimed chorus for members and friends of the LGBT community.

Rory Freedman poses with some skinny bitches of a different variety. Actually, we can't verify the gender of these dogs. PROVIDED

Must love dogs

Books. You know Rory Freedman for her "Skinny Bitch" diet books, but she has turned her attention to pets.

Rory Freedman, known for her book "Skinny Bitch," a diet book about veganism, always considered herself an animal lover — but it wasn't until she was in college that she had an awakening.

"I realized some things I was doing in my everyday life weren't aligned with being an animal lover," Freedman says.

In her latest book, "Beg," Freedman details a radical new way of regarding dogs.

"The book is a love letter to animals and a call for action for animal lovers," she says.

"Beg" is a book the whole family can read, as Freedman has given up swearing — a staple of her last book.

Freedman offers tips on how to evaluate our relationships with animals, not just pets like cats and dogs.

MARY ANN GEORGANTOPOULOS
maryann.georgantopoulos@metro.us

All animals are equal

Living in urban areas, the most common pets are cats and dogs. The same love we feel toward them can translate to other, more foreign animals.

- "Cats and dogs are easy to relate to," Freedman says. "The same part of our heart that loves cats and dogs can be applied to all animals."

Be present

Freedman admits that time alone like on a walk or driving in car is a convenient time to catch up on calls, but argues pet owners should disconnect when with their animals.

- "Don't take your phone with you when you're on a walk with the dog," she says. "Be present. Be aware that we are the light of their lives."

Find your path

Freedman didn't write the book to preach a certain lifestyle. People just need to prioritize what's important in their lives in order to find their own path and show compassion for all animals.

- "Is a horse-carriage ride in New York City really romantic when a horse spends all day walking on pavement?" she asks.

DID YOU KNOW?

Food Storage

No. 5 It's best to store your dry pet food in its original bag.

Why? Well, we're glad you asked. The original bag is designed to protect the food from oxygen & humidity, and it displays the barcode, batch and expiration information, all of which is helpful in the event of a recall. Exposed to oxygen, foods lose their nutritional value, and worse, fats can go rancid, causing the food to spoil. Then wouldn't an airtight container be better? Well yes, and no. Because you'll need to open the container at least once a day, air and moisture will get in, and the airtight seal will trap the moisture & create a perfect environment for mold to grow. Some molds (Aspergillus, which loves grains and peanuts) produce aflatoxins, which are carcinogenic and lethal. A little bit of air exchange is better than an airtight seal.

To keep dry food fresher longer, buy no more than your pets can consume in 45 days or less. Store about a week's supply in a small, clean & dry food storage container in a convenient place. Scoop food from the top, so the food exposed to any air is consumed first. Squeeze the air out of the opened pet food bag, fold over the top, and secure with a food clip. To keep the bag safe from pests, store the clipped bag in a clean, dry storage bin. The food will retain maximum flavor as well as nutritional value down to the last crumb.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.

Underestimating your competition is apt to produce undesirable results. Unless you carefully evaluate the strength of your adversaries, you could lose out.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.

It's extremely important that you maintain a realistic but positive attitude concerning your work. If you inflate the difficulty of your job, all initiative will desert you.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.

Your survival today depends on how well you can function independently of others. Don't operate under the illusion that co-workers are looking out for anyone other than themselves.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.

It would be wise to support your mate in public, even if you secretly disagree with his or her position. It's a good strategy to show a united front.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.

Instead of trying to impose your thinking on your co-workers today, first listen to their ideas and/or what they have to say. They might have some superior suggestions.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.

Since finances are likely to be a touchy issue, instead of getting involved in a joint endeavor where another controls what you invest, try to handle all of your funds yourself.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.

If you're in a position of authority, be careful of how you treat your subordinates. If you come on too strong, you could create a situation that might get out of hand.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20.

If you attempt to appease associates rather than follow the dictates of your judgment, many of your efforts could turn out to be counterproductive.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18.

Your spending habits are likely to be influenced by the company you keep. If you're with high rollers, chances are that you'll be more extravagant than usual.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.

Be careful, because you follow an inclination to test your will against a colleague's. It's an exercise in juvenile expression that you'll later regret.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.

Don't be intimidated by someone who expresses him or herself in a bold, traumatic fashion. There could be nothing at the bottom of such a display.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.

It's best not to enter into a joint venture without a clear sense of who does what and where it will all lead. Make sure everyone's priorities are in place.

It's better to err on the side of watchdogs

Re: Stop blaming America first (Metro, May 29) I am an American. As a citizen of a republic, I have a responsibility — not to display a flag pin or a car magnet, but to pay attention to what my government is doing, participate in public discourse and vote accordingly. Re: Look twice, shoot once (Metro, May 30) Letter writer Jonathan Perry is off base when he blames Congress for the Washington

The bridge collapsed when a truck hit supporting structure. Congress did agree in 2009 to massive infrastructure spending, but Obama wasted it on other things.

Now he complains that Republicans won't let him do that again.

Bruins-Penguins should be well worth the wait

NHL playoffs. The Eastern Conference Finals could very well get wild, offensively speaking.

It seems like three months now that we've been waiting with much anticipation for the Bruins-Penguins 2013 Eastern Conference Finals series to begin.

It's a joy to say that the fun finally gets underway Saturday night (8 p.m., NBC) at CONSOL Energy Center in Pittsburgh for Game 1.

After that, things will get back into the familiar playoff rhythm with Game 2 on Monday (8 p.m., NBCSN) in Pittsburgh before Game 3 on Wednesday (8 p.m., NBCSN) and Game 4 next Friday (8 p.m., NBCSN) at TD Garden. Game 6 and 7 will be on back-to-back nights (June 11 and 12).

These teams haven't met in the postseason since the Wales (now Eastern) Conference Finals in 1992, so it's been a while, even if Jaromir Jagr (4 assists in this year's postseason) is still playing — albeit on the other side now.

The great footnote to the NHL's final four in 2013 is that the Kings (2012), Blackhawks (2010), Bruins (2011) and Penguins (2009) are the last four Stanley Cup winners.

Regular season results certainly don't mean anything once the playoffs roll around, but it's hard not to mention that the Penguins were 3-0 against the Bruins in 2013. Granted, each game was decided by one goal, and two of them were in Pittsburgh.

Both teams have roughly the same wear and tear. The Penguins went six games with the Islanders in the first round before cruising past Ottawa in five games; the Bruins had to go to overtime in seven games to get past Toronto before they buried the Rangers in five. Pittsburgh's series with the Senators ended one day before Boston's with the Rangers, so there is seemingly no advantage in terms of rest (or rust).

When you look at the NHL playoff leaders in the most important offensive statistics, they're dominated by Bruins and Penguins. David Krejci (5 goals, 12 assists) leads in points, Sidney Crosby (7 goals, 8 assists) is tied for the goal-scoring lead with teammate Pascal Dupuis (7 goals, 3 assists) and Chicago's Patrick Sharp (7 goals, 4 assists). Kris Letang leads in assists (3 goals, 13 assists) and Nathan Horton (5 goals, 7 assists) has the best plus/minus at plus-14.

Throw in Evgeni Malkin (4 goals, 12 assists), and Pittsburgh and Boston possess the top five scorers in the postseason, which means that one can expect a series dominated by offense.

That is, unless Tuukka Rask and/or Pittsburgh's goaltending duo of Tomas Vokoun and Marc-Andre Fleury get hot.

One of the marquee matchups in the Eastern Conference finals between Boston and Pittsburgh will be the showdown between Patrice Bergeron and Sidney Crosby. Crosby will have 27 points in 18 meetings when going up against Bergeron and the Bruins.

Lead paint poisoning affects over one million children today.

Learning disabilities, hearing loss, speech delays, violent behavior and, in rare cases, seizures and even death; these are just some of the effects lead paint poisoning has on young children. If your home was built before 1978, lead paint on your walls, doors, windows and sills may be dangerous. And it's not just large paint chips that can cause damage. In fact, three granules of lead dust are enough to poison your child. Let's make all kids lead-free kids. To learn more about the simple steps you can take to safeguard your family, log on to LEADFREEKIDS.org or call 800-424-LEAD.
